

PSYCHOLOGY

The Mount's Psychology program provides excellent preparation for careers or graduate study in mental health, child development, research, human resources, education, and more. Students in our program develop strong critical thinking and analytical skills through training in statistics and research – skills that are highly valuable in today's workplace. Our seniors have won numerous regional and national awards from Psi Chi (International Honor Society in Psychology) for presenting their exceptional research at professional conferences, giving them a competitive advantage. Psychology is not just about therapy, and MSJ students investigate a variety of options through Careers coursework, Service Learning, and co-op placements. If you want to study why people behave the way they do while contributing to society in a meaningful way, Psychology at the Mount is for you!

BEYOND THE CLASSROOM

HANDS-ON EXPERIENCE

Students can gain valuable experience with the Mount's extensive Service Learning, practicum, and cooperative education programs. Psychology co-op sites have included local hospitals, nonprofit organizations, and mental health agencies serving children and adults in the community. Many students receive job offers as a result of these experiences. Our students also have the opportunity to collaborate on research like The Schizophrenia Oral History Project with our award-winning faculty.

PSYCHOLOGY TRACKS

In addition to our general psychology major, you can focus your area of study via one of our psychology advising tracks: Clinical/Counseling, Criminal/Forensic, Health, Business, School, or Sport Psychology. You could also tailor your Psychology major to prepare you for further study in other health professions such as child life, physical therapy, or public health.
